A young child is labeled as "Dull-witted" by his teachers. The child spends much of his time either drawing pictures or looking at the clouds. The child believes that he just needs to be "fixed" and that he will then be able to do all the things an average student can. The movie is about how a boy who has dyslexia learns to believe in himself and develops an appreciation for life despite his many obstacles - all due to one teacher's relentless patience and determination.

The music was composed by Amjad Nadeem, with lyrics penned by Sameer.

The film is based on the childhood incident of Mr. Vigneshwaran, who is one of the most popular teachers in Chennai school system. He was once called 'Dullwitted' by his teachers because of his inability to study well. The film is about how he overcame this difficulty and inspired his students many years later to develop their potentials and follow their dreams too.

The movie is inspired from the real-life story of Vigneshwaran, a teacher who helped thousands of students out of difficulties. He was a victim of dyslexia when he was in school, but he overcame the difficulty and became a famous teacher. The movie is about how a dyslexic child learns to believe in himself and develops an appreciation for life despite his many obstacles - all due to one teacher's relentless patience and determination. Vidya Balan learnt how speak Tamil for her role as Shonali Bose, the director of "Taare Zameen Par".

The film released on 25 July 2008 in India, receiving positive reviews from critics and audience both. The film received the Audience Award at the Toronto International Film Festival as well as several international awards. It was screened as part of the 2009 Sundance Film Festival and won the Children's Jury Award for Best Feature - Drama.
